

Transforming Tax Administration: Toward an Effective, Trusted & Inclusive IRS

The Center for Taxpayer Rights is pleased to convene this conference on Transforming Tax Administration: Toward an Effective, Trusted & Inclusive IRS. In August 2022, Congress enacted the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA), Public Law 117-169, which provides for $80 billion in funding over a ten year period to enhance Internal Revenue Service (IRS) resources and improve taxpayer compliance. While some of this funding may be reduced in future appropriations bills, there is no doubt that the IRS needs a major investment in cash and expertise to transform itself from a mid-20th century tax administration to one that reflects and meets the needs of today's taxpayers and the economy they operate in.

Over the spring and summer of 2023, the Center for Taxpayer Rights held a series of Tax Chats! with experts from the private, academic, nonprofit, and government sectors that explored various aspects of tax administration. These Chats! have helped provide a context for the type of transformation necessary to bring the IRS into the 21st century and not only improve its revenue collection practices but also its taxpayer service and benefits delivery approaches. You can access videos and materials from the Tax Chats! here.

This in-person and virtual day-long conference is the culmination of the Tax Chat! series, held in-person in Washington DC and live-streamed via Zoom, at which we will explore key themes, including:

- the balance between service and enforcement;
- increasing transparency of and public participation in IRS rulemaking and policy-making;
- the IRS research agenda of the future; and
- digitalization and the digital divide.

We are honored to have IRS Commissioner Danny Werfel as our keynote speaker.

The Tax Chat! series and conference are made possible by the generous support of the Laura and John Arnold Foundation. We are also grateful to Skadden,Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP for donating their conference facilities for this conference.
